

What is Higher Education and Learning Program?

First launched in 2001, the Higher Education and Learning Program (H.E.L.P.) addresses a crucial problem in many developing countries.

It facilitates sustainable social and personal development while promoting higher education.

Who benefits from Higher Education and Learning Program?

H.E.L.P. has two segments, built around the needs of youth in under-privileged countries.

Higher Education Program will target those who have the will and merit to continue their studies but cannot afford the tuition fees and other related expenses.

The Learning Program aims at providing vocational training to young people in fields compatible with the region's demands. Students are expected to acquire skills that would help them earn their living and therefore achieve financial independent.

Why Higher Education and Learning Program?

H.E.L.P. is an extension to our Child Sponsorship Program (C.S.P.). With the generous support of our devoted sponsors, many children are supported until age 18. Stemming from HCI's mission of promoting sustainable development, H.E.L.P. provides the support these young men and women need to acquire the means of independent and dignified living.

At a later stage, we plan to expand the program to include other eligible students.

How does Higher Education and Learning Program work?

Beneficiaries will primarily be children who have are no longer eligible for the Child Sponsorship Program, when they turn 18, and would like to continue their education or master a trade.

A progress report would be provided once each term to keep you updated on your sponsored student's progress.

How much does Higher Education and Learning Program cost?

Higher Education and Learning Program costs $45.00 monthly for a child from Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Guyana, Kashmir, Pakistan, Somalia, Sudan and $75.00 monthly for a child from Bosnia, Palestine and Lebanon.
